To Listen

One of the most important things we have to do is to listen and learn from our mistakes. Listening first before you respond can always get you out of problems. Communicating is also very important. Starting conversations with someone you don't know can always teach you new things that we didn't know before. Not only do we learn from new conversations but it can also change your point of view for things that you didn't know before. We can also learn a lot from discussions when people disagree with us. It sets a new mindset and wants us to look for answers.

Accepting each other's beliefs instead of just criticizing lets a person reach new heights in a certain way. We are fortunate to live in one of the countries that has so many different cultures. People come from different places around the world and have different ways of thinking. They may think just because they heard from other people about maybe their life was hard or easy.
